Overview

Tunis Village is so well known for its pottery that it holds an annual festival where every nook and cranny of the village is filled with paints, clay, and perfect pieces to take back home. If you're not there in November, when the event usually takes place, fret not – there are plenty of year-round places to both make and buy pottery. The Fayoum Pottery School is perhaps the best-known; established in the 1980s by Swiss expat Evelyne Porret, this quaint little workshop has become part of the Tunis community.
